"Apparently I was quite a nuisance as I cried most of the day," recalled Mrs Iddenden, now aged 70, who was then Alice Gibbs and in the infants class at Hempstead Village School.

Mrs Iddenden, who now lives in Rochester, Kent, was prompted to send in a photograph of herself and other children at the school when she saw a picture of her teacher, Miss Winifred Foster, in the "Weekly News".

Golden awards

A SAILOR and an accounts clerk from Saffron Walden were at St James's Palace, London, to receive their Duke of Edinburgh gold award certificates.

They were Midshipman Graham Finn, 19, of Victoria Avenue, and Angela Brown, 21, of Long Horse Croft.

One was one of those little girls to whom tears came easily, as they often do with little girls," said Miss Foster, of Farmadine, Saffron Walden.

Despite the tears, young Alice obviously enjoyed her time at Hempstead School and remembers well the special school treats held at a farm in Hempstead which was owned by Miss Foster's father.

"We used to travel in a hay cart and had tea and races for a penny and half-penny," she said.

"We are very proud of him because we don't often get former cadets going into the Navy," said his squadron instructor, Mr Ian Glover.

Angela, a former pupil of Saffron Walden County High School, now works for Ciba-Geigy in Duxford.

father sent a waggon for the children in the afternoon and, if it was wet, we put straw down in a barn for them," she said.

Mrs Iddenden left Hempstead School when she was 14 years-old to go into service in London while Miss Foster taught at the school for 15 years and then went to the Boys' British School.

She taught there from 1937 to her retirement in 1964. During that time about 1,000 boys passed through her hands.

THE UTTLESFORD Watch Group, which is part of the junior section of the Essex Naturalists Trust, has embarked on a study of the garden at Saffron Walden Youth Hostel in the High Street.

As part of their project, members of the group have erected eight nest boxes and will be studying the birds and other wildlife in the garden
