SOME QUESTIONS

What are the most pressing issues in local history?

What new subjects and themes need to be investigated?

What should be the aims of local historians in the new Millennium?

How can local societies serve researchers better?

Is there adequate provision for enabling those working on local history to meet and make contact?

Is there enough contact between family and local historians?

Would researchers welcome a list of the names of other Essex local history researchers and their subjects?

How can ESAH help?

THE ESSEX SOCIETY FOR ARCHAEOLOGY AND HISTORY

The Society dates back to 1852 when 40 or so ladies and gentlemen met in the old Colch ester Town Hall and resolved to form a society 'for the purpose of reading papers, exhibiting antiquities, discussion, etc.'. Today the Society offers its members:

- a programme of excursions and events.
- access to a large library at Hollytrees,
 Colchester, which includes the journals of many other local societies.
- Essex Archaeology and History, an annual journal of more than 100 pages.
- a thrice yearly Newsletter.
- a chance to meet and talk with other likeminded people.
